

RIVER BASIN PLANNING PROCESS

The River Basin Council shall identify water quantity and water quality issues in the river basin as follows:

- The council shall identify the information already existing in the river basin regarding water quantity and water quality. (Inventory resources and analyze resource data);
- The council shall use the following factors to define what the council needs to learn regarding water quantity and water quality in the river basin; List various factors.....?
- The council shall identify the various governmental and private entities interested in water quantity and water quality in the river basin; and
- The council shall meet with interested entities (scoping meetings) to identify water quantity and water quality problems and opportunities existing in the river basin.

The River Basin Council shall formulate alternatives regarding water quantity and water quality problems and opportunities.

The River Basin Council shall evaluate alternatives regarding water quantity and water quality problems and opportunities.

The River Basin Council shall develop a plan regarding water quantity and water quality problems and opportunities.

The River Basin Council shall implement a plan regarding water quantity and water quality problems and opportunities.